

Me

So this is wireframe testing for our prototype for a recycling machine.

Allan

Why is it five different things at home screen?

Me

Okay. So what's, what do you think are most important items here?

Allan

It's important for like some of them like maybe like coffee cups. Unlike disposable, I don't know I feel like you could you could if you wanted to group them into like drinks. Yeah, something like that. Maybe this to me, even if I think even if you guys did have icons, you know, even if you did have icons for like eight icons is a bit too much.

Me

Okay so it would look like that but it's colour coded.

Allan

Maybe if you like sorted until like drinks food, like colours whatever. Yeah, that would and then you go in and then you get these other options. Yeah, that might help to just like kind of because it's just a lot of information and taken at once for me. Yeah.

Me

Okay. Do you think Say that idea of a header and a subcategory. So going, adding to actual level of to something like this, we already have a couple levels of interaction. But yes. Do you think that's going to be too long process?

Allan

I think once someone's engaged, they're not going to turn around this, especially if it's recycling. Like, for me, at least if, if I saw three icons and I saw eight icons, I'd be more inclined to touch like user if I saw. Yeah, three. And then once I click it, there's more options. There's nothing I can do to do at that point. I just feel like that one might turn away. Yep. She's already involved. Yeah.

Me

Yeah. Sure. Do you think out of all those things, there are some that are I guess we're looking at like daily life. Do you think all of these are important in daily life? Like just like it's looking like Town Hall food courts.

Allan

I know because like, obviously Feeling like the metro, whatever you have these. I feel like napkins tin foil. takeaway containers and food waste, they wouldn't be as much. You'd have more bottles. So you could aim at like yeah, demographic? I don't know. You can narrow down. Yeah.

Me

It's looking to be in context by positioning to be in three core areas, right? Yeah. Cool. Do you think instead of like a rubbish bin, it would like it if there's a compost bin. What do you feel about compost bin with a digital screen and record instead of a rubbish bin to that? You're like, I don't know. Yeah, so

Allan

Yeah, an extra bin like this wouldn't affect me in any way if I'm gonna put it in like put my compost in the bin.

Me

Cool, thank you.
